ARTIST STATEMENT

I am a contemporary painter working between Ulster landscapes and East Asian philosophical traditions. My practice explores landscape as a cultural and psychological space shaped by memory, migration, and lived experience. Drawing on oil painting and the conceptual structures of Chinese ink painting, my work emphasises slowness, material presence, and spatial restraint. I construct painterly environments that reflect inner states and collective histories rather than specific locations.

Since relocating to the UK, my practice has developed through professionally curated and juried exhibitions nationally and internationally, supported by independent critical responses. Alongside exhibition activity, research, archival engagement, and sustained observation of place form a core part of my methodology, contributing a cross-cultural perspective to the UK's contemporary visual arts landscape.
